St. Matthews civic leader and longtime Episcopal Church Home volunteer earns the 2007 Cornerstone Award

The Episcopal Church Home has awarded its most prestigious award to a tireless volunteer. David H. Brooks accepted the Episcopal Church Home's 2007 Cornerstone Award at the Home's annual dinner on October 25.

David is well-known in Louisville's business community and in the Episcopal community. His professional career included 33 years as a banker with Stock Yards Bank. He served on various civic and business boards and committees, not the least of which is his involvement with the Episcopal Church Home. His volunteer service at the home spans an incredible 17 years. He's served as board treasurer, board secretary, and board president. He also served on the board's various committees including the executive committee and the finance, governance and development committees. David's volunteer work at the home follows that of his father, Willett, who also volunteered many years of service.

David and his wife, Jackie, have been generous donors to the Memorial Care Center campaign and are actively involved in the current "Building on Faith" campaign for a new St. Luke's chapel on the Episcopal Church Home campus.
